Buy sticky labels and print them out with your details to speed up entries. With stamps, the only difference between first-class and second-class is that with first, Royal Mail aims to deliver your letter or packet the next working day. It aims to deliver second-class by the third working day. So unless the closing date's near, don't buy first. Social media is a godsend for campers. Contests abound on Facebook and Twitter, so it may be worth signing up if you haven't already. To enter contests, you usually need to 'retweet' a firm's tweet (ie, repost it on your feed). Always do this directly from the promoter's Twitter page to be in with a chance. Facebook comps usually involve 'liking' a company's page, so this is for those who don't mind their mates seeing what they're up to. The temptation's to set up two Facebook accounts, yet it's against Facebook's rules to have two, and a few MoneySavers have been banned for this. It's hard to search for competitions on Facebook, so try searching for 'Facebook' on our Competitions board. Snap-sharing networks Instagram and Pinterest are buzzing with contests. Prizes can be tasty, as Elmo34 found: I entered a photo for a Very. They messaged me and it arrived the next day. Also search for 'Instagram' on our Competitions board. Before entering, search for other entries with the same hashtag to ensure yours stands out from the crowd. Finally, don't set your profile to private or promoters won't see your entry. Many companies run competitions via the social scrapbook Pinterest, which lets users share favourite images and create virtual pinboards. Find comps by doing a Pinterest search for 'competition', googling or, again, searching our Competitions board. Competitions usually involve pinning or reposting an image or following the promoter's instructions to create a pin board representing their brand. If you're worried about other campers copying your board before you've officially entered, set it to "secret" until you're ready to make it live. Depending on a contest's end date, you could be notified the next day or next year. The small print usually explains whether you will be contacted by email, phone or post. Often the postie just turns up with a parcel (every door knock is exciting). For a tiny minority of competitions, promoters ask people to return to the site to see if they've won. congruence - Class 7 Exercise 16 Question 1 - RS Aggarwal - Learn Maths math sight class 7 solutions. mathsight class 7 solutions.pdf. indiannica learning mathsight class 7 solutions. britannica learning mathsight class 7 solutions.pdf. britannica learning mathsight class 7 solutions. mathsight book class 7 solutions
